CAUSE

On December 6, 2014, at approximately 0340 hours Las Vegas Metropolitan Police were dispatched to the offender's residence for a domestic disturbance. According to the police report the offender's girlfriend went out drinking with some girlfriends. When she returned home, Acosta punched her in the face with a closed fist and then continued to punch her in the arms and legs causing redness and a scratch. This officer did speak to the victim the following morning and she stated the offender did not hit her and it was just a misunderstanding. Acosta was not arrested for this incident until approximately a month and a half after the incident occurred. Acosta's girlfriend recanted her story and stated that she did not wish to press charges against the offender.

On March 27, 2015, Acosta plead no contest to this offense and was sentenced by the District Court Judge to six months of domestic violence classes, a $345 fine, and forty-eight hours of community service. Mr. Acosta does not live with the victim in this case anymore. They do have minimal contact with one another as they share custody of a toddler.

The probation office is requesting that Acosta's conditions be modified to include mental health counseling (anger management) and ninety days of location monitoring. Acosta has been on supervision for three years with minimal violations. He has maintained steady employment and a steady residence while on supervision. While the probation office does take this situation seriously, we also believe conditions can be put into place to address this.

The Probation Form 49 was read and signed by Mr. Acosta. He does not oppose this modification and waived his right to the assistance of counsel and a hearing before Your Honor. The form is attached for the Court's review.
